WHO ARE THE PRETTIEST TEN

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Who heads the list of the world's ten most beautiful women?

Charles Dana Gibson, America's foremost pen and ink sketch artist and creator of the "Gibson Girl," says Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson does.

And Ben All Haggin, the famous oil painter, says Mrs. Ben All Haggin does.

Naturally, both declared today, they regard their wives as the ideal type of beauty, and, from an artistic point, each thinks his wife has no superior.

Mr. Gibson, in placing the famous "Gibson Girl" before the public, spent many years in search of a model whom he believed represented the exact type of beauty he wished to portray. And although he had models galore, representing various types of beauty, none of them, he says, ever equaled the beauty of his wife, who, before her marriage was, with her sister, now Mrs. William Waldorf Astor, generally accepted as one of the prettiest women of both hemispheres.

On the other hand, Mr. Haggin, who spends most of his time portraying in oil members of the elite, and who, naturally, has come in contact with women frequently mentioned as possessing every quality that goes to make up beauty, is equally positive that no woman can be found in the entire world who equals his wife in beauty.

Various artists and illustrators have, within the past two weeks, given a list which, in their opinion, included the ten most beautiful women throughout the world. In only one instance was the name of Mrs. Gibson omitted. On the other hand, Mrs. Haggin's name was mentioned but twice.

Mr. Haggin, a son of James B. Haggin, and one of the best athletes that ever wore the blue of Yale, was at work on a portrait of a well-known society woman when an "Examiner" reporter met him in his studio at 23 West Sixty-seventh street.

"Now, see here," he said, when the nature of the visit was made known, "you might just as well ask me to lift the Statue of Liberty, with one hand as to decide this question."

"Really I wouldn't dare to pick the world's ten most beautiful women. In the first place, you must remember that I am married, and in the second, that I daily come in contact with women who are often mentioned in the daily papers as being representative types of American beauty."

"If I were going away on an exploring expedition to the North or South Pole, and was safely on board a ship that was to take me on my journey, I might—but only might, remember—name the ten women I consider the world's most beautiful."

"I have read with much interest the opinions of various artists as to who they thought made up this list, and in some instances I agree with them and in some I don't."

It was at this point that the reporter ventured the statement that Mr. Gibson, while selecting a list of ten most beautiful women, had done so only with the understanding that Mrs. Gibson would be given the place at the top of the list.

"Oh, is that so?" replied Mr. Haggin, glancing toward a painting of Mrs. Haggin resting on an easel near where he sat. "Well, Mr. Gibson may think so, but I don't. The prettiest woman in the world, barring none, in my opinion, stands right there," and he pointed to Mrs. Haggin.

"Now let me tell you that it is only natural that Mr. Gibson should pick Mrs. Gibson to head the list. I am going to go him one better, and, while selecting no list, state without fear of a controversy that Mrs. Haggin is the most beautiful woman in the whole world. Her beauty excels that of a composite photograph or painting of all of those who have been picked by various artists."

"I have never seen a woman more beautiful than Mrs. Haggin, and I can tell you that I have seen some mighty handsome women."

"If I were to tell you the names of the other nine women who would make up this list of mine—and I am not going to tell you—my life would not be worth enough powder to blow me to kingdom come. Can you imagine the dreadful time I would have dodging the horde of women, who on numerous occasions I have had to tell I thought were far superior in beauty to any other women I had ever met?"

"And, then, what do you think Mrs. Haggin might say?"

"Terrible, terrible. I hate the very thought of it."

"Women, we adore them all. Dear souls, what would the world be without them? Isn't it for women that we poor men work and work and work? What would life be to us without the women folk? Nothing, I'm positive. And every man will agree with me."

"On our way back to the office stop the first man you meet whom you thing is a married man—and they are not hard to detect—and ask him who is the most beautiful woman in the world. If his name happens to be Smith, he'll tell you without stopping to consider, that Mrs. Smith is. And

CHINESE PLAN GREAT MEETING FOR RELIGION

One of the most notable religious meetings of years will take place in Honolulu tomorrow night, when the Chinese of the city gather at the Liberty Theater, which they have secured for a great mass meeting.

Four organizations are cooperating—the Fort street Chinese church, St. Peter's church (Episcopal Chinese), St. Elizabeth's and the Beretania street mission.

In the early part of the evening there will be appropriate stereopticon views, and later addresses will be given by prominent Chinese on the general subject of "China's Need: How it is Being Met by Christianity."

The addresses are:

1. Christianity in the Home.
2. Christianity in Public Life.
3. Christianity in Education.
4. Christianity in Business.
5. Christianity in the Life of the Individual.

F. W. Damon, who is in charge of the meeting, would be most happy to see a large number of prominent white people at the meeting tomorrow night. In this critical religious and economic period of China's development, the influence of the white men and women will count powerfully.

102,000 TONS SUGAR MARKETED

Sugar Factors Report 34,000 Tons Additional Now Afloat.

One hundred and two thousand tons of sugar of the 1912 crop have reached the market to date, according to Manager A. M. Nowell of the Sugar Factors Company, and some 34,000 tons additional are afloat and expected to get to market at a good price. The lowest price yet received is 4.29, and the quotations are expected to advance before long.

The last half of the Missouriian's cargo reached market recently at 4.50, about 2700 tons, and the first half of the Mexican's cargo should get to New York via Tehuantepec early next week, probably at 4.48.

The sugar is moving well and the harvesting all over the islands is progressing favorably.

HAWAII CANE LOOKING WELL

H. P. Wood, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, accompanied by Mrs. Wood, arrived on the Kilauea this morning after a week spent in a trip to Hawaii. The trip was of a personal nature, but Mr. Wood had time to hear some good news on Big Island crop prospects.

"The sugar men of Hawaii say that the saccharine content of the cane is higher than ever before, and a banner crop is looked for," said Mr. Wood this morning. "The cane, young and old, is looking well."

"We had a fine trip, with smooth sea and good weather."

rectly, but I think it very likely that a new record was established for the reason that we developed a greater pressure than has been secured before, and that the mortar was fired at 45 degrees, which gives the maximum range. Yes, in all probability Fort Ruger has set a world's record."

Captain Waller completed his tests this morning by taking down the carriage from which the seven shots were fired and making minute measurements. The results of this week's work will be far reaching, it being almost certain that the government will make the traversing gear pedestal of the new model mortar carriages of steel instead of cast iron, on account of the two breaks which the heavy firing here developed.
